Catching Up

About a week ago I got the opportunity to catch up with one of my friends who I spent a good amount of time with in college. We had classes together, studied together, and played games outside of class. After graduation he ended up moving back to India and I didn't have a good way to reach him for over a year. As we each mentioned how things were going he made the statement, "It's so good to hear from you."

Just a few words had a more profound impact than I expected. Sure we were close in college but I didn't realize how much it meant to him to hear from me. Often in life we do not know the value we hold in the eyes of others. Some people share such feelings and sentiments but that is not always the case. Whether or not we are really close currently with someone, it always seems refreshing and energizing to talk to friends you formerly were close to.

Catching up usually involves talking about life changes like relationships, jobs, and places to live as well how one is doing currently. This week, think of one person who you want to catch up with. It could be someone who used to attend here or a friend from many years ago. They may very well need to know someone remembers them and cares about them. At the very least you will have connected with a person you haven't gotten to in a while.

Many people need to catch up with Jesus. It is not that there is anything changing about Him but that we often need to be reacquainted with our Savior. As much as others need to know they are cared for, do not forget the care Our God has and continues to have for us. I pray that Christ may never be a distant old friend for each of us but a close constant source of encouragement and love.
